INFORMATION

Photographic prints: Printing is done at a professional custom color photo lab. All prints are of the highest quality. The surface is a low luster.

Dry mounting: This is a process by which a print is permanently bonded to a smooth surfaced board. This is recommended for prints 11"x14" and larger to insure a smooth surface when hung. Dry mounted prints usually can be inserted easily into a ready-made frame.

Dry mounting on foam board: This is a rigid 3/16" black board. This provides the sturdiest backing. This is available for all prints 8"x10" and larger and recommended for prints 16"x24" and larger.

NEW: Dry mounting on black art board: Art board is a stiff 1/8" mat board. This is more economical than the foam board but still serves to keep the print absolutely flat. Use this option if you intend to use a ready-made frame which typically cannot accommodate a thicker board. If you plan to have your print custom framed, please order it un-mounted.

Laminating involves bonding a thin soft matte polyester film, with UV protection, to the front of a photo. This provides an invisible protective surface to any print but is a necessity if you plan to hang a mounted print without a frame and glass.

Framing is available. Custom framing includes a custom metal frame (choice of black, silver or gold metal) and UV protective glass. Metal frames in other colors are available for an extra charge, usually about $10; please call for options. If the print is framed to the edge, spacers are used so that the surface of the print does not touch the glass. If the print is matted, the window mat is made from white archival mat board. For best results, photographic prints 16"x20" and larger should be dry mounted before framing.

Cropping: Most images are displayed full-frame—as shot. Most need at least some cropping to make the best-looking print. In addition, common size prints are not all the same proportions. For example, 8"x10", 11"x14" and 16"x20" are all similar in proportion and less rectangular than full-frame while 5"x7" is more rectangular but not full frame. I now offer an 8"x12" print which is actually the same proportions as full frame and a 10"x20" which borders on a panorama.
